

LOWER RAYDON

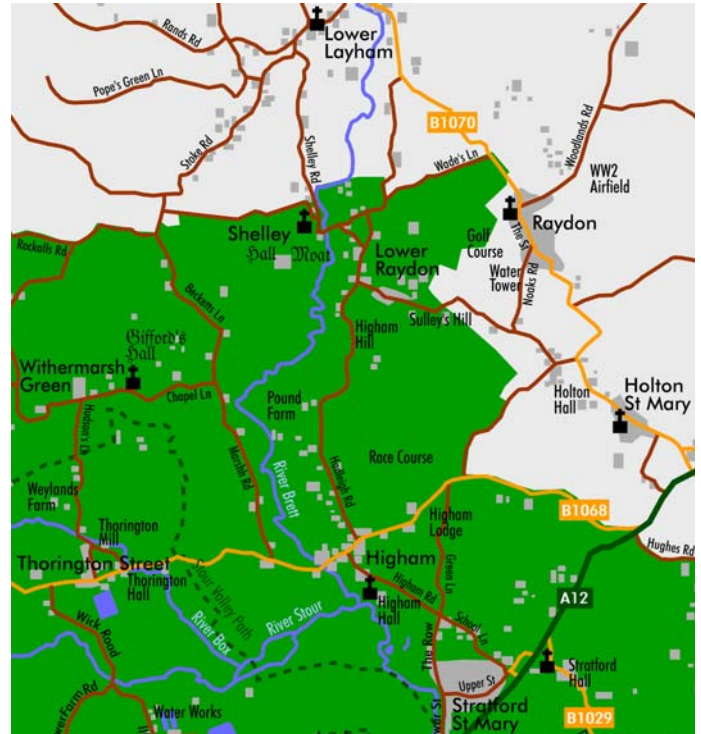

Lower Raydon is a small hamlet located South West of Raydon village, overlooking the valley of the river Brett and adjoining the parish of Shelley, within the Dedham Vale designated AONB.

The larger part of the hamlet is situated on both sides of Sulley's Hill, which leads up from the Brett valley road and at the top, there are outstanding views across the valley towards Shelley and Hadleigh.

Within the last fifteen years, the Brett Vale Golf Course has been established across farmland that was used mainly for rearing sheep in the fifties. The Course is crossed by a number of designated footpaths which are well used by locals and visitors alike.

These again provide wonderful views over the valley floor, where there are examples of older houses externally painted in the traditional "Suffolk Pink", sometimes providing a landscape for Painters to set up their easels on a fine summer's day.

There are no amenities in the village.

The village of Lower Raydon lies on the edge of the Dedham Vale AONB which is marked green
